I really enjoyed working with Aisha and Jovann. I feel like with this project I was a little bit more unmotivated than my other project. I feel like I could have been more involved and more helpful. I kept getting stuck on small things on my page and would just restart completely. I am not a huge fan of html and css. Sometimes I like seeing everything put together but I also get frustrated. I have been really sick too lately due to weather change, so it is hard communicating with everyone online. I have learned a lot though and I am starting to get the hang of containers, columns, rows, and responsiveness with bootstrap. So it isn't that I am not learning or enjoying learning because I am. I was just frustrated with my other project and put more of my energy onto that one. I liked on this project how we had something to design, because I don't like designing at all. I liked the page I chose because I was struggling with cards before, but now I think I am comfortable working with them. I also learned how to make the lines which was pretty cool. I didn't know if the boldness difference was on purpose or not so I just made all of it the same. There was also a misspell for a word so I left it the way it was because I don't know how picky you guys were being. Overall I had a good experience with the group. I just wish I had maybe put a little more effort on my end and done another page. I did help everyone fix their pages and responsiveness though.

I actually worked with Jovann on one of our previous projects, and we worked really well on that one. We still worked well on this one but I think he kept getting frustrated running into issues. Jovann was very helpful though and communicated with both me and Aisha if it was merging, pushing or just asking if we needed help with anything. I always enjoy working with him. Jovann did the catering page and the about page. He was working on the about page for a while because he got stuck on one issue but I helped him with it. Then he started the catering page and was able to finish it with no issues.

This was my first time working with Aisha, and she's really sweet. She also communicated a lot about what she needed help with and if she was changing anything. She ended up doing the photos page and the index page. The index page wasn't really responsive so I helped her fix that. I know she was having issues with the photos page but I am pretty sure she got it to work. I was more focused on fixing my issues on my page before the deadline. I really enjoyed working with her though, the only thing that bothered me a little bit was that her class names were a little confusing and her css was a little messy so when we merged it made things a bit confusing. Her work was good though and I think we all worked well as a team.
